- Modular A levels have external examinations at the end of Year 12 and 13. Linear A levels have external examinations at the end of Year 13 only.
- Most students study four A level subjects at the start of Year 12 and drop to three subjects in Year 13 (obtaining three A Levels and 1 AS Level qualification).
- The above model is not compulsory; guidance is given to students as to the most appropriate number and combination of subjects, by the Director of Academic Studies and the Head of Lower Sixth. Reference is made to the student's GCSE results and career aspirations (as well as the results of ALIS testing, when available).
- Sixth Form teaching continues in Year 12 once all modular examinations have been sat. Students must attend all classes in Year 12, including subjects that have had an AS examination.
- Sixth Form subjects normally have six lessons, of 45 minutes' duration, per week. In the Sixth Form, period 8 may be used to accommodate lessons in subjects that are over-subscribed.

Sixth Form Information

Procedures for making A Level subject choices:

- This Sixth Form information booklet is published to R16 students and their parents in the Advent Term; a Sixth Form Open Evening is also held in October.
- 'Subject Preference' forms (included in this booklet) are completed in October by R16 students. Here, students are asked to make provisional choices regarding subjects to study. The Heads of R16 and Lower Sixth, Director of Academic Studies and R16 tutors provide support for students as they make these decisions.
- Option blocks are formulated based on the information contained on the 'Subject Preference' forms. The option blocks are designed to accommodate the widest possible choice of combinations of subjects. Students are informed that there is no guarantee that all combinations will be possible, but we will do our best to satisfy provisional choices.
- Option blocks are produced and students then choose their combination of subjects. Students may, at a later stage, change their choice within a block, or from a different block, providing no more than one subject is chosen in each block. Changes must be made by half term in the Advent Term in L6 at the very latest.
- Students are informed that, if a subject does not have a sufficient number of students opting to provide a viable course, it may be withdrawn from the programme; however, we will keep them informed of developments and advise them, where possible, of alternatives.
- Students are asked to make final subject choices by two weeks after the publication of the option blocks, usually in February.
- A level blocks in Year 13 will change from the Year 12 blocks. This is because some subjects, where there is more than one group, may have to be combined in Year 13 if numbers in the individual groups are very small, because of students not continuing in the subject.

Sixth Form Co-Curricular Provision

In tutorial periods, Sixth Form students regularly attend talks given by a range of outside speakers, including former pupils, on subjects such as post-18 student life (personal finance, time management, revision skills etc.), charity work and voluntary organisations. They also receive employment and university application advice through visits from, Future Success Careers, UCAS and other external agencies, as well as having the opportunity to attend university open days and careers fairs. Individual subject departments organise visits to lectures, exhibitions, plays and workshops. There is a timetabled Enrichment Programme for students which comprises a variety of activities for a full afternoon per fortnight. This encourages students to try new experiences, build their resilience, develop new skills and gain qualifications, improving teamwork and friendships amongst the sixth form cohort. It includes activities such as cooking, golf, climbing, water activities, local walk, trampolining, finance, TEFL and more.

IELTS (International English Language Test System) provision is available to all ESOL students who need it and individual support is provided for any students who are struggling in a particular subject.

A range of co-curricular activities is available too, including Young Enterprise, CREST, Debating Society, Drama Club, Duke of Edinburgh and Music (choirs and orchestras) as well as sport, with a range of lunchtime clubs being run as well as fixtures and sports activities within the Enrichment Programme.

Students are also encouraged to take part in supporting the learning of younger pupils by spending time engaging with lower-school classroom support or helping pupils with revision (as Learning Leaders) and by playing a key role in the School Council.

University Application Information

In the Sixth Form at St John's, we provide our students with detailed support and assistance as they prepare for the wider world. Almost all go on to higher education and many to high-tariff institutions including Oxbridge and Russell Group universities.

As a registered UCAS centre, we support the university application process throughout Sixth Form, from tutorial periods focusing on how to choose degree subjects and courses, to inviting back former students to give advice on coping with the different aspects of university life and on finding work afterwards. Each year, a professional careers adviser sees all Lower VI students individually to discuss their employment plans.

Sixth Form Information

From the heart

We help organise relevant work experience placements late in the Trinity Term and run a dedicated 'UCAS Week' at the end of Lower VI when a range of speakers visit to give higher education advice and when students are guided through the early stages of their UCAS applications, both in groups and with individual attention from tutors. Tutorial time is given over in the Advent Term of Upper VI to help complete this process and further talks and advice are given by our in-house team, as well as by outside experts: for example, our future medics, dentists and vets have a mock MMI (Multi-Mini Interview) with feedback in November before attempting the real thing when applying to medical schools. We are also building up a team of mock interviewers from relevant professions to help students prepare for those courses which still interview before making offers.

A Level teaching staff make predicted grades based on students' performance at AS and on their efforts and potential in Lower VI. They then send reference notes to the Head of Upper VI who turns these into the final UCAS Reference and also assists closely with the drafting stages of the UCAS Personal Statement that all would-be undergraduates need to complete.

Staff are at the school on results day each August to advise any students who need last-minute support with their offers and places at university.

This will help ensure that the high standards of conduct of our Sixth Formers set the right tone for the rest of St John's. The Dress Code applies for examinations, private study and revision classes unless these take place during school holidays.
